Western Region

Sunday, July 17

- Seasonably hot mid-July temperatures will continue for much of inland California through the first half of the week, with a cooling trend expected for the latter half of the week
  - Moderate to locally high heat risk impacts will persist each afternoon through early week, gradually becoming confined to mainly southern California by late week
  - High temperatures each afternoon will reach 95-105°F across much of the Central Valley (locally up to 110°F in portions of the San Joaquin Valley through Monday), with readings of 105-115°F common for the southern deserts
- Similar to the past few weeks, afternoon and evening breezy winds in and around the mountains, foothills, and southern deserts will bring locally elevated fire weather conditions each day through next week
  - Somewhat stronger winds (with gusts of 30-40 mph) will produce critical fire weather conditions in portions of Modoc, Siskiyou, and Lassen counties on Sunday, potentially lingering into Monday
- Scattered monsoon showers and thunderstorms are expected to form across the Sierra as well as the southern mountains and deserts through Tuesday
  - Widespread impacts from any storms are not expected, though locally heavy rainfall and gusty winds are possible where storms develop
